Letter re: Karine Szekeres

Dear Whom it May Concern,

It is with the utmost enthusiasm and pleasure that I write on behalf of Karine Szekeres, who has recently completed a six-month internship with our office WOJR: Organization for Architecture in Cambridge, MA. Karine first distinguished herself in the office by developing a thoughtful and provocative set of drawings which highlighted methods of spatial organization for a competition that was ongoing in the office. Very early in her internship she illustrated a talent for formal manipulation and three-dimensional dexterity, which was evidenced in several projects that she touched during her six months with us. One of Karine's strength as a designer is that her investigations are excitable, driven, and thorough. She distinguished herself as one who was undeterred by new tools, new technologies and new methods. She had the initiative to learn new software packages on her own in order to be prepared to implement them in the context of the office. Overall, I was struck by Karine's independence and self-awareness. Throughout the internship, she was able to clearly articulate pointed questions about our design process, making discussions and conversations quite gratifying. Karine is a motivated and directed individual; two important characteristics that will help to shape her as a future design leader. In a challenging academic or office context, I know that Karine will thrive. Should you have questions regarding Karine, please do contact me.

Sincerely,

William O'Brien Jr.
